Imam al-Sadiq (p) was the third caliph and the first Shia Imam. He also held the title of Zayyum al-Salam on the graves of the first two Caliphs[3] and the title of al-Amir al-Husain on the graves of the first seven Caliphs of the House of Abbas. Because of his piety, sobriety, wisdom, and authority, he is commonly referred to as Zayyum al-Dawla . [4] [5] [6] Another title, "al-Amir al-Husain", was added to the name of al-Sadiq al-Husain in the 10th century by 'Ala al-Din Ali al-Ajmi in his commentary on the Takht-e-Tuluyee. This title indicates a high level of reverence given to the Holy Prophet and his family, which leads us to believe that the prophet died with the title of Amir al-Husain. Al-Ajmi also mentions that the title was based on the Qur'an and Hadith that the Holy Prophet said; "I am the eldest and the best of the people." ... This title was given by the imams, especially the descendants of the Holy Prophet.[6] Imam al-Sadiq (p), Falsafa and Al Akhal.
