The Star Forté portfolio includes product lines such as anti-ageing skincare, daily moisturisers, concealers, and professional make up for both men and women, and also encompasses the brands of Clinique, Almay, Origins and Too Faced. History Star Forté has been established since 2008, and was originally created to support the release of the L'Oréal Paris and Clinique brands. It had been part of the L'Oreal group since April 2012. Prior to this, it was part of L'Oréal Luxe. Its main global distribution centre is based in Leiston, Suffolk. After the acquisition of Too Faced, L'Oréal stated that this would be too big a burden for the three divisions to share, instead a 'one-stop shop' approach was adopted for Star Forté. In the UK the Too Faced brand was merged into Star Forté, as were all other brands: Clinique, Origins and Almay. In April 2016, L'Oréal Lifestyle appointed Glenn Carthel as new managing director of the group, to replace the former managing director Roger Fridy.
