Endoscopic polypectomy was performed on 2,976 patients (80 per cent were male, and 19 per cent were female). The endoscopic diagnoses were as follows: 1,727 patients with "benign" polyps, 1,469 with "malignant" polyps, and 540 with neoplastic polyps of unspecified malignant potential. Ninety-five per cent of the patients with "benign" polyps and "malignant" polyps had follow-up endoscopy. The mean follow-up was 6.2 years. The total prevalence of recurrence was 2.4 per cent. Recurrences were evenly distributed throughout the various polyp groups. Recurrence was diagnosed at the time of the initial polypectomy in 83 per cent, and later in the remainder. The site of recurrence was as follows: 4.3 per cent in the rectum, 2.1 per cent in the colon, 2.4 per cent in the stomach, and 1.1 per cent in the duodenum. The histologic distribution of recurrences was as follows: 5.3 per cent in adenomatous polyps, and 1.2 per cent in hyperplastic polyps. Thirty-two patients died of causes unrelated to their polyps during the study period. Cancer of the gastrointestinal tract was responsible for the majority of deaths. The number of deaths from gastrointestinal cancer was 3.6 per cent 2d92ce491b
