Would you feel like you had to admit your mistakes? Or maybe you’d be relieved that you’re not in trouble anymore? I have been wondering about this issue for a few weeks, so I decided to talk to one of our local youth pastors, Caleb. Why did you get caught? What prompted you to start smoking? Did you feel like you would get in trouble? There’s really only one reason why we think people start smoking, and that’s to make them feel high or relaxed. I didn’t feel like I was in trouble for smoking. My mom came home and saw me and then I went into the house, she asked me what I was doing, and I said I was smoking weed. Then she asked me where I got it from. I said I had gone to my friend’s house and he had let me smoke. Does it make you sad or upset that you smoked? Or would you feel differently if you thought you might be able to get caught? When I get in trouble for smoking, it makes me feel bad. I don’t feel good about smoking. I feel bad because I’m breaking the rules. When I think about the consequences I would feel if I got caught, it’s not a good feeling, but I have also felt that way before, and it didn’t stop me. I have also been caught before and it didn’t bother me. I feel like that is because I know the consequences and I have a purpose. Did you think you would get in trouble? Or did you just not think about it? I didn’t think about getting in trouble. I just didn’t think about it. I just did it. What did you do when you found out you were in trouble? Did you try to make up for it? Or were you still going to continue with your bad behavior? I thought about getting in trouble. I felt like I would get in trouble. I tried to do better in church and I tried to tell the pastor what
