Feed Notifier Portable [Mac/Win] [Updated]

This is the portable counterpart of Feed Notifier and thus, the installation process is not a prerequisite. However, to carry it with you and use it on the go, you need a USB storage device that holds at least 128 MB. What is the first thing you may ask? Why not use an external hard drive, for example? Well, the answer is simple: as you can imagine, portable devices such as USB flash drives do not have enough space for larger programs such as this one. Portability conveniences This is the portable counterpart of Feed Notifier and thus, the installation process is not a prerequisite. As a consequence, it is not going to add any items to the Windows registry or hard drive, without your permission (as installers usually do), and it will not leave any traces on your drive. Another noteworthy aspect is that by moving the program files to a USB flash drive or other similar removable storage device, you make it possible to take Feed Notifier Portable anywhere with you, and use on the fly, on any machine you have been granted access to. Simple-to-handle environment for creating filters and changing settings This software utility presents quite an intuitive interface, which is suitable to all types of users, including those with little or no previous experience with computers. Moreover, it is non-obtrusive, as it sits in the system tray. Right-clicking the icon brings up a context menu which enables you to add new feeds, disable updates or perform them now, and access the settings panel. From the latter you can view a list of all the RSS and Atom feeds you are following, set up the popups appearance (position, transparency, border size etc.), use a proxy server, add filters and enable history for a custom number of days. Bottom line To conclude, Feed Notifier Portable is an efficient piece of software, which is dedicated to all types of users. CPU and memory usage is minimal and thus, the computer's performance is not going to be affected, and the response time is good. Introduction We all know that social networks are important and useful tools in our everyday lives. There are several reasons for this. For starters, there are very many functions that are directly connected to and rely on social networking. Whether we want to know who's recently viewed our profiles on Facebook, or who posted a comment on our wall, or perhaps even how many friends we have... there are so many ways of receiving the information that our profiles hold. Social networking is also a very interesting and useful tool to join in on discussions. There are many reasons for this as well. Whatever the topic, there is usually a large number of people from which to choose. Another reason for this is that joining in the discussion (if it is relevant to you) can also sometimes be a fun and educational experience. All of the aforementioned reasons are why it is important to have a good social networking strategy in place. We want to make sure that we use social networks to help us every day in our lives. One of the ways that we do this is with the use of social networking surveys. What is a social networking survey? The term 'social networking surveys' can be a bit misleading, as social network surveys are not the same thing as surveys. A social network survey is a form in which we ask people to respond to a certain question, such as the amount of money that they earn, the type of car they drive, or even who they voted for in the US election. Social network surveys may also include questions about hobbies, interests and even thoughts. However, these surveys differ from the typical surveys that you encounter. Typically, regular surveys have a target group and a fixed target group. The target group is a group of people and it includes some portion of people. It is a
