have personally found that I focus better, my mind functions better, I get more done, and I feel better overall if I get the notifications (these are built into Chrome by default, but if you want to change your settings, this addon will set the reminders for you). I also started blinking more, and found that makes a difference in feeling refreshed. I highly recommend this!

Even though it is normal for some vices to dissipate over time, if you've been avoiding them, then it can really be quite disappointing to discover that things just don't seem to go away on their own. This is quite common, and there are many examples to support the same. For instance, there are folks who can't give up smoking and there are others who can't stop their destructive habit of abusing alcohol. Habits are not always easy to break, and even if you have managed to manage to change something in your life, you might have learned that it is as hard to stop as it was to begin the start of it in the first place.
