Rotational cooling of the reaction-diffusion system D+<sup>2</sup>O is investigated by computer simulations. By means of Monte Carlo simulations, the kinetic energy, mass distributions, and time evolutions of D+ molecules and ions are analyzed as functions of the temperature of the bath and the properties of the initial D<sup>2</sup>O/H<sub>2</sub>O mixture. It is shown that rotational cooling is strongly dependent on the type of initial mixture, i.e., on whether D<sup>2</sup>O and/or D+H<sub>2</sub>O are present in the system. The dynamic effect of cooling consists in the modification of the initial ionic distributions. The steady-state D+ D- concentration is found to be higher at low temperatures if D<sup>2</sup>O molecules are initially present in the system. If D+H<sub>2</sub>O and D+O<sub>2</sub> are initially present, the temperature dependence of the steady-state D+D- concentrations is different. of Daniel's road of life. 19.
