Q: WinForms Resizing Controls by Myself I have a form that contains several panels. The panels have a different amount of controls on them, and are all sized to fill the panel. When I resize the form, the panels fill their panels, and the panels expand as needed. My question is, is there a way to let the controls resize as well? I have a textbox that always grows and shrinks as the form resizes, but my other controls don't seem to automatically follow suit. I've found numerous ways to do it using Anchor properties and SizeToContent, but none seem to automatically resize the controls. I need them all to be able to dynamically resize. Is there a way to do this, or am I going to have to resize everything manually when I resize the form? A: I had this problem. There's a simpler way to do this. The first step is to set the WindowState property of your form to Maximized or Minimized. This will stop the resize events. The next step is to do the resize on the Form.Resize event. Here you need to handle the case when a control is
