The serialization is working, however i'd like to be able to call the get_queryset method on a Model that's serialized in one view, and then return the Serialized version of that object to another view. I am not sure how to go about doing that, however here is what I have so far: views.py from django.http import HttpResponse from django.shortcuts import render_to_response, redirect from django.template import RequestContext from yourface.forms import Form from yourface.models import Keyword from yourface.serializers import KeywordSerializer #some general stuff here def some_view(request): key_list = Keyword.objects.all() serialized = KeywordSerializer(key_list, many=True) return HttpResponse(serialized.get_queryset()) A: The serialize does not mean serialize and unserialize. It means create a 'serialized' object (Django calls it serialized, while other frameworks call it JSON or YAML) that's ready to be sent to the user's browser. Create a model that will be serialized: class SerializedKeyword(models.Model): keyword = models.CharField(max_length=200) Add the serializer to it: from django 3e33713323
