was so great at playing a character that is supposed to be a homosexual prostitute was a hard pill for him to swallow. Let's put that into a little context for you. Crude oil accounts for over half of the world's energy consumption. It is a big part of the reason we use any kind of fuel at all. That is why the world's largest car maker is dependent on crude. That is why four of the ten biggest oil companies in the world are American (down from six in 2008). That is the reason many of the largest oil corporations are foreign owned. And yet, when the CEO of Shell ended up playing gay prostitute to win an Oscar award we can imagine what the reaction would have been had the role been filled by a straight black man. These aren't simple times where executives of big companies are automatically awarded a high honor when they perform a role that allows them to suck up to Hollywood. Big corporations don't get rewarded for simply being good at what they do. So, to get an Oscar for being gay, in this day and age, is something else. Why is Argo such a brilliant film? Because it's great to have audiences love you and then come away feeling sad that they have, in fact, loved you. Because watching our share of human decency and our share of human stupidity is a good day and a bad day when it comes to how we treat each other. Because Spielberg puts the work into his characters and because Amy Adams gives an amazing performance. Because Ben Affleck delivers one of the very best performances in his career and gives a more-than-competent performance in a year where he is a bona fide contender for Best Supporting Actor at the SAG Awards. Because some of these people have killed for less and because what we are seeing in the movie is only a small part of what a big corporation can do to some poor hapless people. Because, at the end of the day, Big Oil is a big company that has the money and the political influence to get anything they want. It's companies like that that find it quite hard to accept any kind of criticism or scrutiny (see above) and yet, when that scrutiny is extended to them, they find ways to fight back. Which, for all of those reasons, makes Argo a great movie. It also makes it a great movie in a year that,

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CS4?

Icterid herpesvirus infection in the absence of family history of atopic dermatitis. Icterid herpesvirus (IdHV) is an emerging virus, previously reported mainly from European countries, and responsible for acute vesicular skin lesions in seabirds. We report two cases of migratory birds from Chile with sudden appearance of a vesicular skin lesion, and an anamnestic data of contact with dead or dead-appearing seabirds from that country. No history of prior illness, contact with injured or dead birds, or contact with handling of dead birds by hunters was reported. Due to the absence of clinical features or suggestive signs of other viral infections, molecular assays for herpesviruses of the family Herpesviridae were performed and positive results were obtained for both viruses; IdHV and herpesvirus of turkey. To our knowledge, this is the first report of IdHV in Chile and the first case of association between IdHV and migration birds. The co-circulation and co-infection of both viruses during the analysed period, and the clinical expression of vesicular skin lesions, highlight the importance of virological studies in the etiology and epidemiology of the disease.

How do you install bumblebee? I'm trying to install bumblebee on a nvidia quadro K2000 card, and i have to say, this is impossible. I'm getting a boot error when i try, but from what i've read, i believe that this issue is caused because the power_supply detection module is not being loaded. I used bumblebee to boot ubuntu, and it successfully detect the power_supply module, and i can see it in lsmod. I have the stock 2.6.35.2-22 kernel, and can't seem to use any kernel module that provides power_supply and acpi support. Does anyone know how i can force bumblebee to use other kernel modules to probe for acpi/power_supply? 1 Answer I had to do this as well. To find out which kernel module is being loaded in the first place, you must look at /var/log/kern.log. You can probably navigate to it via the GRUB boot menu. In this log file, you will see entries for all the kernel modules that load or unload from your system on a regular basis. You
