streaming service Hulu is rolling out a new photo filter for its iPhone app that allows users to make animated cartoon-like icons look like they're standing in front of a set of stairs.
Update: An earlier version of this post incorrectly stated that the service was rolling out the filter for the iPhone version of its app, rather than the iPad version. We apologize for the error. Hulu's photo filter is similar to Snapchat's Animoji feature, which allows users to mimic the expressions on their own faces. Snapchat has faced criticism for its privacy concerns, however, as it can process photos without the user's consent. There are also a number of third-party apps, such as iShowU, available on the App Store that allow users to create similar animated effects. Like the Animoji feature on the iPhone, the photo filter on Hulu allows users to choose from multiple filter choices, and can also be animated. Instead of having users use their own faces as reference points for what an animation should look like, the filter will use a number of different reference clips, which can include cartoon-like shapes, staircases, green screen backgrounds and more. Sneak Peek At launch, Hulu's app will include only a few preset filters, including a staircase, a black and white photo, a green screen, a disco ball and a kitchen set. The filter will not be included with the Hulu Plus subscription service, however, as customers can purchase it through in-
