Dunn (vocals/guitar), John Quinn (drums) and Mike McGuire (bass). In the late 1970s the band played a regular Monday night slot at The Coach House, an historic venue, owned by Peter Berg and later Elvis Costello, located at 721 Santa Monica Blvd, West Hollywood, California. The Coach House was a destination, legendary space where pop-culture icons would sit with iconic actors and musicians at tables, and tend bar. The band's first single, "Back in Your Face", was a power ballad on the Craig Moss Albums Label. It was produced and recorded in Los Angeles, and like the rest of the Craig Moss Albums Label, with mixed results, and only managed to sell 1,500-2,000 copies. In 1977 and 1978 the band released two multi-artist albums on small independent labels: The Art of Joe, the follow-up album, was created by the film scoring team: Hans Zimmer, and David Foster, producing by David Foster and Max Kolins. The album was released in 1978, and featured the song "Get Me To the World On Time", with vocals by drummer, John Quinn. In 3e33713323
