Update 3.Queens park workers leave after walking off job Four workers at a Queens park walked off their jobs Tuesday morning after a supervisor verbally and physically abused them, they said. The four — three men and one woman — who were among a group of eight who sought to do park cleanups, went out to pick up trash bags at 90-16th St. and 90-12th Ave., near Second Avenue, about 10:30 a.m. on July 23. When they arrived, they said, they found a supervisor, identified as a supervisor at the time, yelling at the group from across the street. The supervisor, now identified as Luis Menjivar, told the workers he was a supervisor with the city Department of Sanitation and not to enter the area. That's when one of the workers, who would not identify himself, said he wanted to call police, and the two others in the group, believing
