data to the people who are suffering." – Dr. Mathew Rockall, Programme Manager, Health for Peacebuilding, UNDP The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) has released the new "Crisis Impacts" information and mapping tool, which provides a cell-phone sized view of the impact of a crisis on communities, people and the environment. The tool – which takes around four hours to complete – helps frontline responders, disaster response teams, journalists and humanitarian organisations to monitor and measure the effects of the humanitarian crises unfolding on a daily basis. "In the midst of chaos, it is important for humanitarian professionals to be able to provide information and data to the people who are suffering," said
