Yang has been charged with "virtual currency speculation." The prosecution believes that the cryptocurrency investor has gone through a course of illegal trading and the purpose of this course of action was to acquire wealth. The suspect has taken approximately 100 million won (about $55 million) since 2017. According to the prosecution, the suspect's aim was to earn another 1.4 trillion won (about $782 million) through trading, but the reason for the loss of this amount was not clear. An interesting detail is that the criminal activity took place in some countries where cryptocurrencies are not supported. That is, in South Korea, China, Thailand, Malaysia, and Indonesia. Yang Hyoung-sook is not the first person to be accused of large-scale bitcoin speculation in recent years. Indeed, South Korean cryptocurrency investors were already taking care of accumulating large amounts of crypto, which, on the one hand, had led to the rise in their prices, but on the other hand, had forced them to face additional risks. In June 2017, the former minister of Justice of South Korea Oh Joon-hyuk and two other people who are suspected of holding bitcoin were arrested. A total of 14 billion won (about $8.2 million) in bitcoin had been seized in the raid. At the same time, the former head of the Financial Supervisory Service Kim Hyun-tae was accused of bitcoin speculation and was given a suspended sentence. Later, Kim apologized to investors for the incident. Other similar cases, in particular, the arrest of a Japanese bitcoin trader who was charged with the purchase and sale of a total of $9 million, were also reported in the media.
