2. When you've previewed your image, select Open, and then Open a New Document. You open Photoshop from the OS X Finder to insert a fresh image into Photoshop's file-opening window. You can even open Photoshop from an image in another app. 3. Click to select your image. The open image appears in the upper-left corner of the Photoshop window. 4. Click the Open button in the lower-left corner of the Photoshop window. Photoshop opens the image in the image window. 5. Click the New Layer button and navigate to the next step. The New Layer button creates a new transparent layer that's just a copy of the original layer, so Photoshop layers are numbered from zero, with zero being the original image. 6. Drag your image to the center of the Photoshop window. Alternatively, when you've opened an image, drag it to the center of the Photoshop window. An image on the screen becomes a thumbnail on the left side of the Photoshop window. 7. Click the New

Layer button again. Photoshop adds another layer above the original image. 8. Resize the image if it appears too small. You can click the Image Size button at the top-left of the image window and then use the Size slider to make it larger. Keep in mind, however, that resizing your image changes the resolution and may make the image appear pixelated. 9. Add a new layer to edit the background of the image. Place your cursor where you'd like the new layer to begin. Click the New Layer button and choose Layer. 10. Select Color Overlay from the Transparency Panel and click OK. The Background Color menu appears. 11. Choose the color you'd like for the new layer's background. You can also hold down the Ctrl key while clicking the Background Color menu and then choose the color you like. 12. Click OK to apply the color to the new layer. You see the color appear in the color bar at the bottom of the Photoshop window, and the color display changes from black to the selected color. Your changes are now appearing in the image window. 13. Open the Adjustments Panel on the right side of the window and choose the Op

Disposable pads are used for a wide variety of purposes. For example, disposable pads are used for menstrual and/or fecal incontinence, for vaginal and/or rectal protection, and for similar functions. One type of such pad includes a fixed solid pad portion and a separate releasably attached liquid absorbing pad portion. The pad may also include an adhesive layer disposed between the pad portion and a non-adhesive layer. The non-adhesive layer helps to protect the pad portion from unintended removal from a skin surface. Furthermore, by protecting the pad portion, the non-adhesive layer helps to maintain the pad in a desired form. The non-adhesive layer may be a flexible non-adhesive polymeric film. Examples of such layers may be found in U.S. Pat. No. 5,888,408 (Barma et al.) and U.S. Pat. No. 5,405,528 (Varga et al.) incorporated herein by reference. U.S. Pat. No. 6,177,148 (DiPerna) incorporated herein by reference, describes a disposable sanitary product containing a non-adhesive polymeric foil. The foil is a non-woven material, such as a non-woven polyester or a non-woven polypropylene web, that is laminated to a non-adhesive polymeric film. The non-adhesive layer can be either separate from or a part of the pad portion. In either case, the non-adhesive layer can be configured to protect either the pad portion or the entire disposable pad. It is also possible that the pad portion could be completely unprotected in some areas such as its inner surfaces. U.S. Pat. No. 6,277,963 (Claeys) incorporated herein by reference, describes a reusable pad having a non-adhesive layer that could protect the pad from unintended removal and serve to maintain the pad in a desired form. The pad portion and the non-adhesive layer may be attached by an adhesive layer disposed between the pad portion and the non-adhesive layer. Non-adhesive layers can be materials that are non-tacky, i.e. material that does not have a tendency to stick to a material that comes in contact with the non-tacky layer. The non-adhesive layer can be made of polymeric material, a material containing water-dispersed gums and other

Q: Playframework 2.4.x - EL expression not found for constant I have the below play framework 2.4 code:

@helper.form(action = routes.StudentForm.save(student),

'action', 'class', 'method', 'submit') { ... } And i get the error that the expression'students' is not found. I have looked for solutions online, but none seem to be applicable. Also a little context: I'm new to Play Framework and Scala. Am I doing something wrong? A: The syntax in your template is correct, and it's working the way you expect it. I suspect that students in your template is a property rather than a parameter, in which case, the name of the property needs to be prefixed with @ to be evaluated in the template. Try changing it to the following and see if it works: @(students: List[Student])(implicit request: RequestHeader) @layout.students.studentForm(@students) Q: textbox return value not working I have a simple markup to code a form and an input field and show the value: `function showQ(){ var q = $('q').val(); alert(q); } showQ();` I also included a default value: "Get a Quote". I keep running the script but nothing happens except for the default value. I guess the problem is with the alert but I cannot figure it out. Any help is appriciated. A: You're missing the call to the function, try putting the function call before the alert, and adjusting the name as well:

function show
