License Generator is a lightweight application that web developers can use to generate random license keys, based on a standard and custom-defined set of parameters. Installation is not a requirement, so you can drop the executable file to any location on the hard drive and just click it to run directly. It is also possible to store License Generator on a USB flash disk or similar removable device, in order to use it on any computer without previous installers and with minimum effort. What's more, the Windows registry does not get updated with new entries, and the app does not create new files on the HDD, leaving it clean after removal. The interface is represented by a regular window with a clean aspect, where you can specify the number of keys to generate, along with the key length. Starting the automatic task is done with the click

Key Macro is a function-based macro recorder, which automates text selection tasks on the desktop. It does not focus on anything specific, but records all clicks on selected elements. This means that it records keyboard and mouse actions as you type, and automatically inserts them as code snippets when it comes time to use them. It does not have access to the Registry, so there are no entries that are created on your computer. It can be used to record any object on the screen, or its location on the desktop, and even edit its behavior before it gets executed. The program is useful for testing or debugging, because it can be used in ways other than just recording texts. You can do it manually by clicking on objects, or automatically, and you can use it as a tool to automate the process of web application and website development. It can be used to record clicking on online videos, and even extract text from flash animations. While recording you can edit the text to be recorded or selected, as well as insert custom text. Text can be selected by single clicks, ctrl + click or shift + ctrl + click, and copy
