Toward this goal, we have focused on two general problems, 1) the role of viral infection in the precipitation of the encephalitic syndrome known as AIDS dementia and 2) the role of viral infection in the syndrome known as progressive multifocal leukoencephalopathy (PML). Finally, we have concentrated our efforts on HIV-infected patients with these neurological syndromes, and we have begun to define the role of virus strain and host factors in the two diseases. 1) We have established a mouse model in which the Jackson strain of mouse hepatitis virus (MHV-4) is neurotropic. We have shown that infection of newborn mice with this virus causes an encephalitic syndrome, and that infection of adult animals results in demyelinating disease.

To investigate associations between aqueous humor concentrations of chlorophyll-a and -b, total chlorophyll-a and -b, and carotenoids and the indexes of light damage in eyes with and without age-related macular degeneration (AMD). Chlorophyll-a and -b, total chlorophyll-a and -b and carotenoids concentrations in aqueous humor (AH) samples from the right eye and thickness of the retinal pigment epithelium (RPE) in the same eye were determined in 48 eyes of subjects with AMD and 16 eyes without AMD using HPLC and Fourier transform (FT) - infrared (FT-IR) spectroscopy. In AMD eyes, associations were found between the AH concentrations of total chlorophyll-a, chlorophyll-a/chlorophyll-b, and carotenoids and retinal pigment epithelial index and the thickness of RPE. No significant associations were found between AH concentrations of chlorophyll-a, chlorophyll-b, and carotenoids and light damage parameters in eyes with and without AMD. This study demonstrates that AH concentration of chlorophyll-a, chlorophyll-b, and carotenoids in AMD eyes has an impact on the RPE thickness.Eupatorium spinosum Eupatorium spinosum, the brush tickweed, is a plant species endemic to the southern Western United States. It is native to the Southwestern United States, in Colorado, Utah, Arizona, Nevada, and California. It is widely known as a noxious weed in many states, notably California, where it is declared a regulated weed by the Department of Water Resources (DWR) and Department of Transportation (Caltrans). In California it is "restricted" in four of the five Central Valley Project (CVP) reservoirs. In 2014 it was declared an eradicated species in Alameda County, California. It is a perennial herb growing from a thick taproot, producing a single stem up to 40 centimeters tall. Leaves are palmately divided, 3e33713323
