What's the difference between an ArrayList and List? I am using List so what I am doing now is: `ArrayList list=new ArrayList(); list.add("www"); list.add("hh"); list.add("bbbbbb"); list.add("aaaaaaaa"); list.add("oooooooooooo"); System.out.println(list);` If the code was like: `List list=new ArrayList();` It would be the same as the following: `ArrayList list=new ArrayList();` What is the real difference between the two and why to use one over the other? A: I think the difference is that List extends Collections.IEnumerable; and ArrayList does not. You could always write your own wrapper on top of both, but I suggest not to. A: ArrayList is the base class of the ArrayList collection (List). Also, it is a mutable class and does not implement the collections.IEnumerable interface. List is the class of the List collection (that is, the actual implementation of the class) and it does implement the collections.IEnumerable interface. A: As provided in the answers, here is the outline of the difference between 1) ArrayList 2) List 3) MyOwnCollection Q: How to execute a function after every ajax call from AjaxAutocomplete Hi I am using AjaxAutocomplete Widget from
