The present invention relates to pressure control devices for hydraulically controlled damping devices of the type equipped with a pressure chamber or cavity at a pressure oil outlet of a working device or machine and connected with a hydraulic control unit. One of the main parameters influencing the damping action of a hydraulic damping device is the mechanical design of the pressure chamber or cavity, wherein the larger the diameter and the greater the volume of the chamber or cavity, the longer and more efficient the damping action. In this connection, it is especially important that as much as possible of the hydraulic medium be confined in the pressure chamber or cavity and not leak outward in the form of a mist. As a result of the above described mechanical characteristics of hydraulic damping devices, there is a considerable trend for the pressure oil outlet passages to be located at the rear and also in the vicinity of the rear end of the pressure chamber, as explained, for example, in the text by M. Uyeda, T. Okamoto, and K.
