“The new physics engine is an important element of Fifa 22 Product Key’s gameplay improvements,” said Greg Goodrich, Senior Producer at Electronic Arts. “The team has been hard at work trying to get the simulation of the animation and ball movements as true to life as possible. It’s all about delivering the best simulation of football in the game and FIFA 22 delivers with PlayStation 4 the most accurate physics simulation in football games ever.” FIFA 22 delivers the best gameplay and experience ever, with the immersive authenticity of EA Sports FIFA™, a console-specific story mode, a wildly-popular Ultimate Team™ and a major new gameplay feature called “Succeed by Connecting,” which has players use the ball intelligently by timing their attacks with teammates. Players have control over how the ball moves, its behavior, and the ability to hit unexpected targets like a defender or goalkeeper. “We’ve listened to what fans have been asking for ever since the start of the transition to FIFA Ultimate Team in 2011, and we’ve made improvements to the game that make FIFA Ultimate Team the most accessible and strategic way to spend your time as a player,” said Oliver Pye, SVP of Ultimate Team at EA. FIFA 22 will support up to 32 player matches and provides a 16-player experience on all FIFA 20 licensed platforms. FIFA 22 features the largest number of dedicated servers in the history of the series. The game has been enhanced to offer full simulation functionality on PlayStation 4 Pro. FIFA 22 also gives players the ability to compete as individual players in the game’s Custom Teams. A new Quick Match option allows players to play and manage their own teams, complete with in-depth statistics, competitive play and personalised news feeds. In addition, FIFA 22 introduces revolutionary new camera features, including the Ball Cam, which provides players with a view of the ball, similar to real-life broadcasts. Players can also see the path the ball takes from the moment it leaves the player’s foot to its arrival at the target. The camera can also be used to show key moments of gameplay, like goalkeepers diving for a ball and players on the run, or to simply capture a replay of an action that was otherwise missed, such as a player hitting the post. FIFA 22 also adds a robust suite of Match
