An example would be A/An yes/no/maybe Nn right I'll try to make it more clear by posting my small code. Any thoughts? sentence = "I'm pretty sure I bought a " + noun + "." I expect the listener to capture "I'm pretty sure" and "I bought a " and output them. Basically the same as a shell's grep command except it

... Any suggestions on what to try? A: It's loading fine. Camillo Editor is built using Firefox Add-on SDK, you just need to load the build of it into Firefox. It's a must-have extension for any web developer. You may also need to install this extension to test your website: The BitTorrent Client is the best download manager in the world. It is designed to support encryption, special features (such as Magnet Links, Extra Options, and so on), and many other niceties that the rest of the world takes for granted. Each week The Pirate Bay adds hundreds of new torrents. If you want to see them all, it takes a lot of time to go through them all and download the files. Instead of going through hundreds of them, it is much more convenient to first preview them and then download the torrent file. It is easy to do this using BitTorrent Client and its built-in web interface. This post provides a tutorial on how to preview and download torrent files using BitTorrent Client. The BitTorrent Client is a lightweight download manager that is aimed to be user-friendly and easy-to-use. Unlike other non-free download managers, BitTorrent Client supports HTTP (we call this version "Client HTTP"), magnet links ("Magnet Links"), and other useful features, besides being P2P. It is the latest version of the BitTorrent Client 6.0.0.12. This is an open-source cross-platform BitTorrent application that has been built using the latest version of FFMPEG, libtorrent, and the GTK+ 2 toolkit. It is currently available for 32-bit and 64-bit x86 and x86_64 architecture-based Linux, and Windows. Preference and Plugins Every application has a few preferences: on Windows, which are stored in the registry, and on Linux, they are stored in a text file in the user's home directory. Here we present just a few of BitTorrent's important preferences: Experimenting Optionally download and install an experimental version of the BitTorrent Client. To install it, select Tools > Options > General > "BitTorrent Testing". This function is available on the Settin
