Later Premium on the web for saving articles for offline reading. It's been working fine for more than a year and was a life-saver for me whenever I'm travelling. Unfortunately, yesterday something went wrong. There's a problem with the current version. I can't download/open any links in RSS feeds and can't even read any article itself. With their free (non-premium) version, I can download the articles in less than 10 seconds, but still can't open them. I tried troubleshooting their support by multiple means, but all to no avail. One of the topic that was raised there was this You can't download RDP (required by our extension to get new posts from syndication feeds). So, please disable it. So I did. The problem still persists. I can't even view any posts on Read Later. This is absurd! The same app, same website, same everything works fine on my phone. The only difference is, I'm not a developer. I'm paying for the premium version for nothing. Apparently, the fact that you're a developer can play a crucial role in these sorts of situations. Yes, it's not always like that, and other, simpler, solutions can take care of most of these things, but if you're a developer, you'll probably have the skill to implement more advanced solutions. For this reason, I've decided to answer it myself. Unfortunately, it's not easy to switch from one tool to another. There are many tools that will work with RSS, some of them might be paid or free, some are paid and some are free. It's up to you to do a bit of research and find which ones can serve your purpose the best. The only solution I can think of is to download the text of the articles you want to read and save it b7e8fdf5c8
