Nissen, Special to The Daily News This is one of those recipes that I try to make every year. I have no idea how I made it in years past because I cannot for the life of me remember. One day, having just come home after being out of town for awhile, I made the soup and tasted it. It was terrific. I cannot remember where I got the recipe from, but I do know that the ingredients are on the "trustworthy" list. How it came about was that my family was visiting from Alabama and I was cooking for them. At the time, I was a teacher, but I have been retired for years. My wife was a teacher, but her school closed and she retired from teaching. Now we are retired from teaching and just simply enjoying our life. There have been a lot of cookbooks that I have bought over the years, but I have never really cared for them. That is, I am not really into the "trying new recipes." But I always take a few other cookbooks along so that if I do come across one that I really like, I can use it. This particular recipe came from one of those books. It was written by a lady named Penny from Alabama. I must have been in the bookstore one day, looking at cookbooks and happened upon this one. I knew I would make it this year because it sounded wonderful and it was from Alabama. This recipe is for chicken-based stew. It is very easy to make and I know that all my family members will enjoy it. I usually don't tell them what it is until the last minute so that they will have a surprise. There are a lot of flavorings that can be added to the stock you make ahead of time. I like to make stock at least a couple of days ahead and use it in different recipes. After the chicken is cooked, it is easy to remove it from the bones.
