It also will make decisions about presidential appointments to the federal judiciary and the Supreme Court. That's a lot to ignore, and for the next two years at least, Republicans will have a hand in shaping so much of the future of the nation. Republicans won primaries in Connecticut, Maryland, New York, and Pennsylvania — all states that were won by President Barack Obama last November. This is only the beginning, and some of the other big primaries still to come: At least one more state with a strong GOP primary — Wisconsin — still has not declared results. And Democrats in West Virginia, Kentucky and Mississippi have not yet announced results for contested primaries. There is no way to know how the Republican wins in Connecticut, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky will affect the outcome of the general election, but they will surely play a part. Republicans in Connecticut had hoped to win the governor
