Especially if it is hand lettered and written on an old piece of paper. I just gave my girlfriend a paper book at WWDC. I got this copy of "The Paperboy" that my great grandfather brought from 'Nam. It is very very old, and I am sure that the paper is not that great. I simply love the idea of this book, it is such a cool and simple idea. I feel as if it was created just for me. There are also entire courses on making your own books. Here are a few sites I recommend: One of my hobbies is to make paper books, I use old sheets of paper and give them a new life. I have a book on swimming, one on Asian Studies, and one on the Summer Olympics in London. You can create a simple but effective book. Just enter some of your content on them, it will look great. I believe that they are great companions. Many of my friends know me well. I rarely give away the books, for some of them, they are very precious. I just finished making my own publication, and I hope that you will like it. The book is very simple, I used a circle, a spool and a piece of paper and it took about an hour, so not too much. I hope you will like it and I hope you'll have a chance to make your own book.
