Choose the Photoshop type of file you want to create. For example, a JPEG is a file format for photographs, while a PSD file is created by Photoshop for graphic professionals to use for making mockups or development previews for other programs. After you select a file type, the New dialog box appears (Figure 5-1). On the left side of the dialog box, it tells you whether you're working with a layer-based file (a PSD file) or a non-layer-based file (a JPEG). Layer files can be manipulated in layers, so we describe them in great detail in the coming pages. For now, just note that a non-layer-based file looks just like a regular file.

But there's another way to see the city in the New York of your imagination—with a professional photographer behind the camera. Photographer and avid New Yorker, Tom Keaton of Keatonphoto, has been arranging road trips for the last 15 years, and two years ago he started offering ride-alongs on his NYC trips with Keatonphoto. No matter which city you're visiting—say, Boston, New Orleans, or even the San Francisco of the 1970s and '80s—Tom can find a ride you'll love, even if you think you've seen it all. Gritty Van Alstyne: She's a fan of mountains. "I'm a big fan of big, scenic things, and I'm also a big fan of the small and the quirky, so New York makes sense," she says. A former model, St. John's University student, and racecar driver—she even won the "drag race" at last year's IndyCars—Ms. van Alstyne is the one who invited me to ride along. Photo: Keatonphoto.com

What's New In?

WoW's future has been in a bit of a state, one that seems bound to get worse as the game reaches the end of its life. Blizzard themselves have been hinting at an even less frequent maintenance schedule, and have even canceled updates since patch 3.0.2 - a design flaw that looks likely to become a bigger problem as the game grows ever more bloated. But Blizzard are masters of keeping the lights on, and so far, has managed to quell the worries. But this month, something has changed. When patch 3.3.0 was released, and especially when it was updated, Blizzard gave us a clue as to what was to come. The main thing that changed was the once-a-week server maintenance. In the days since then, announcements have appeared that the maintenance is occurring three times a week - or even more frequently. Blizzard no longer have a statement that the maintenance is occurring twice a week. Instead, they are simply saying that the maintenance has changed. Since then, the blog posts have been the same. No new information has been given. Nothing has changed. This silence is more than just confusing. This silence is not good - it is telling. Even the social media team didn't bother commenting on the matter. There was no statement on Twitter, no mention on the forums, and no comments on Reddit. So the silence is awkward, and it's made people worry. Blizzard has introduced many changes with patch 3.3.0, and this hasn't changed. While it's a highly-optimized patch, it introduced some performance changes and a new way to play the game. You can read all about it here. The only thing that has changed since that patch is that the maintenance schedule has changed. It's so strange. Are they planning to issue a statement? It's unusual for a developer to leave us in the dark. It could be that they're just testing the waters. In theory, they could simply be testing the water by having a maintenance scheduled for two weeks in a row. It could be that they've been busy with other things, as it is now the end of 2015. It could be that there's nothing to say. They could be testing the water, but not wanting to make a huge change without also making a statement. It could be that they've been busy with other things, as it is now the end of 2015. It could be that they're going to do more than just a
