BERLIN (Reuters) - Germany expects Turkey to "demonstrate a constructive attitude" on the issue of the fate of German-Turkish journalist Deniz Yucel, a lawmaker for Chancellor Angela Merkel's conservatives in parliament said on Saturday. FILE PHOTO: German-Turkish journalist Deniz Yucel who was arrested in Turkey in February, speaks to the media in Istanbul, Turkey January 9, 2017. REUTERS/Osman Orsal The arrest of Deniz Yucel and two other journalists has caused diplomatic tensions between the two NATO allies. Police have charged the three men with supporting a terrorist organization and inciting the public to hatred and hostility. The three have denied the charges, which they say are politically motivated. They have been held in pre-trial detention for more than a year. "We... expect that Turkey will demonstrate a constructive attitude and will ensure that the issue of Deniz Yucel is adressed," Tom Rosenthal, a deputy speaker of Germany's lower house of parliament, the Bundestag, told broadcaster n-tv. He also said the issue of Deniz Yucel was discussed in the phone call between Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan and German Chancellor Angela Merkel on Wednesday. Germany summoned Turkey's ambassador on Friday, a move described as "routine" by the Turkish government and called Germany's first response to the arrests which came after a German court ruled that the men must remain in pre-trial detention. The 2017 ruling was later overturned by Germany's Constitutional Court, clearing the way for their release. Ties between the two have been strained since German rights group Human Rights Watch in August criticized Ankara's record on media freedom. Germany's AIVD domestic intelligence agency said at the time Turkey was harboring Islamic State militants.
