Two novel beta-galactosidase activities have been implicated in milk oligosaccharide (MOS) synthesis. These activities, encoded by the genes B4gal-1 and B4gal-2, are localized in a single chromosome locus on BTA14 in the bovine genome, close to the alpha-lactalbumin (LALBA) gene. Here, we report the first functional characterization of B4gal-1 and B4gal-2 in B4gal-/- mice, where this mutation is lethal. B4gal-/- mice were viable and showed no significant defect in their phenotype, allowing us to use them to provide the first evaluation of the in vivo role of these two activities in MOS production. The N-acetylglucosamine specific activity of beta-galactosidase enzyme extract from the B4gal-/- mice was approximately one order of magnitude lower than in the wild-type samples. Further, using a B4gal-/- mouse model, we showed that both beta-galactosidase activities can be synergistically upregulated by LALBA overexpression. Additionally, the activity of B4gal-2, but not of B4gal-1, was increased in the milk of mice bearing a null allele of LALBA. These results suggest that both B4gal-1 and B4gal-2 function as beta-galactosyl transferases and that the presence of both activities in the mammary gland ensures a minimum level of expression of alpha-lactalbumin required for optimal galactosylation of lactose.Consensus Form Hi fellow conservatives, I found you guys after going crazy over my last post asking for help in the reinterpretation of my faith. I guess it can't be easy to get through your day with faith in Christ and yet have people telling you that you are wrong. I'm sorry if I sounded rude, I had no idea how to respond without offending you. I just wanted to know
