“FIFA 22 HyperMotion incorporates some of the game data we’ve collected from 22 real players who played a complete match at a high intensity,” said Chris Morgan, FIFA Lead Engineer. “We have studied it and identified some of the ways it can be applied in the game engine, but it also taught us a lot about the movements of a player in a context of complete match play.” FIFA 22’s new simulation engine, “True Player Physics,” provides more accurate collisions and impacts. It also uses the player models of FIFA 21 to improve the accuracy of player animation and textures, making even more realistic-looking player movements. “FIFA 22 has a higher degree of precision and realism than ever before in the history of the series,” added Morgan. FIFA’s physics engine and algorithms are completely different in FIFA 22 compared to FIFA 19. “The new engine is able to capture the essence of 22 players, and therefore it is able to produce more realistic interaction between the ball and the players,” Morgan said. “Since the physics engine is more accurate, it is important to provide players with more feedback that helps them better interact with the ball and the players around them.” FIFA 22 introduces a brand new on-pitch audio system, the Xbox One X Enhanced sound system, which means that audio is no longer reliant on the pre-defined soundtrack system. Fans can now experience truly immersive, “pro-quality” audio in the game, including the famous crowd chants and background soundtracks. And with the addition of Audiomania, users can now listen to the music of over 100 famous artists and songwriters, and hear them on their FIFA 22 soundtrack. The sound of the game is created by a unique crowd sound system which uses statistics from the real crowd chants heard around the world during the previous FIFA World Cups. FIFA 22 introduces completely redesigned environments which feature new plants, animals and interactive decorations which can be obtained by playing matches in the game. Some of the new in-game environments include the revamped Nou Camp stadium, the iconic “Bierkeller” venue, as well as the Treble Maker Stadium. “We took some inspiration from iconic Japanese sports stadiums, with their unique features and decorations,” said Morgan. “We hope fans enjoy these new environments,

FIFA is the world's biggest football videogame, with more than 110 million sales, a growing and passionate community and a roster of over 700 licensed players from over 50 countries and 100 official clubs. FIFA has been at the forefront of videogames since it was first released in 1994, continuing to appeal to fans all over the world. The New Era of FIFA in FIFA 22 Since the release of FIFA 19, we've been focused on taking all of the great content from FIFA 19 and evolving it further, improving and adding all of the things that FIFA fans have been asking for and missing from the game. In FIFA 22, EA SPORTS and the game's development studio 'EA Canada' have worked with the FIFA team to find the answers. We know you want to play the football you know and love. FIFA 22 is not just about more realistic gameplay, amazing graphics, more and deeper co-operation with the Clubs, better passing and shooting mechanics and more. We've gone back to the core of what makes videogames exciting and fun. Powered by Football FIFA 22 is fuelled by football. We decided to focus on areas where we can actually see, feel and hear the impact of the football world. For example, the release of a 99 second free kick that leads to a goal. These moments are what make football the greatest sport in the world, and as a player, you can experience them with every kick and pass. FIFA 22 is the first videogame to truly simulate tactics, team strategy and the pace of a game. While maintaining the speed and intensity of the game, we've improved controls and significantly reduced the time it takes to make that important long pass or a dribble through the lines. We've also focused on the core match day experience with a deeper communication system and new camera angles to immerse you further into the match. FIFA is known for innovation and we never stop finding new ways to innovate. In FIFA 22, we're focused on making the best gameplay we can with our own in-house teams of experts. We've partnered with the world-renowned academics at University of Exeter to research, playtest and ultimately deliver incredible gameplay innovations. FIFA 22's innovations across all modes enable you to play in a new way and to continue to play football in a very different way to any other football videogame. Over the bc9d6d6daa
