(Adobe owns both Painter and Photoshop so that you can't confuse one with the other.) The easiest way to begin is to create a blank canvas—also known as a _document_—in Photoshop. Then, to get going, choose File→New to create your blank canvas and choose a blank file. In the next steps, you learn how to work in different layers to create complex designs. Q: Is it possible to start a process inside a DLL? I'm wondering if it is possible to start a process from inside a DLL like this: void start_process(char* program) { HANDLE r = NULL; STARTUPINFO si; PROCESS_INFORMATION pi; memset(&si, 0, sizeof(si)); si.cb = sizeof(si); memset(&pi, 0, sizeof(pi)); //error code here if (!CreateProcess(NULL, program, NULL, NULL, FALSE, 0, NULL, NULL, &si, &pi)) { return; } //close handle and free memory CloseHandle(pi.hThread); CloseHandle(pi.hProcess); CloseHandle(pi.hThread); CloseHandle(r); //error code here } int main() { start_process("C:\\windows\\system32\\otepad.exe"); return 0; } But when I run this, start_process returns 1. I am calling this DLL from a C/C++ app, using the LoadLibrary function. And the process I'm wanting to start is a desktop background process which I want to start from inside a DLL. I tried GetModuleFileName and GetCommandLine, but those return what I started from inside the DLL. A: In addition to getting command line arguments, CreateProcess launches a new process with a non-zero lpCommandLine argument. To make a C-style string you have to allocate enough space for the entire command line. As explained in the MSDN sample: // For this example, the command line is stored in a string char command_line[] = "C:\\Windows\\System32\\otepad.exe"; char* arg1 = command_line; char* arg2 = NULL; while (arg1) { char* next = strchr(arg1, '\\');
