Q: Dictionary of UserItems for a Table in UserControl I am working on a custom control that contains a number of labels and a number of textboxes. In this control, I want to store and access the text property of the textboxes in a dictionary of user items. My first thoughts were to use a dictionary of UserItems, but I couldn't get the control to work. There's a really good answer here: Dictionary of UserItems in WPF In the other question, the link that was provided, the answer suggested that a dictionary of UserItems should be stored in a ControlTemplate. Below is a skeleton of the code for the custom control. I'm trying to figure out how to store a Dictionary of UserItems in the ControlTemplate.

The hotel has a very friendly and helpful staff, but quite honestly, the space for what they had for us was a very large suite that appeared to be more of a suite with a sitting room. Nothing fancy but that's fine since we weren't there for the reasons that one would be staying there (eg. for a business meeting). Rather, we were there to spend some much needed quality time with our daughter and family and it was a nice bonus of our visit since we aren't always surrounded by them as we frequently travel. The location is perfect, right in the heart of the city with so many restaurants and cafes surrounding the hotel. We used car2go since we spent most of our time out and about, so being able to use the car2go station to get around was great (even if parking was relatively pricey for the hourly rate). We were traveling with two toddlers so it was nice to have the jetted tub in our bathroom, plus two extra pillows and high chairs. The refrigerator could be a bit tricky to get out, but we were able to figure it out with a bit of extra time. Overall, we really enjoyed our stay and would recommend it to anyone looking for an affordable and convenient downtown location, while also being very close to everything Disney has to offer
