1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method of making a cation polymerizable resin composition which are used as a negative-working resin in the production of a relief printing plate. 2. Description of the Related Art The photolithography process, or the relief printing process, is carried out by applying a lithographic printing plate obtained by affixing an oleophilic ink receptive layer, called a printing plate, to a suitable support. Among various kinds of oleophilic materials affixed to the support, a negative-working photosensitive resin plate is used more frequently than positive-working ones because a negative-working plate is less influenced by environmental conditions such as temperature and humidity as compared with a positive-working one. The negative-working printing plate has a structure in which a resin layer affixed to a support such as a polyester sheet, is exposed through an image-forming layer, and is developed with an aqueous alkali solution to selectively remove the image-forming layer, thereby making a relief image, i.e., a non-image area. Accordingly, in the negative-working printing plate, the resin layer used for the image-forming layer contains a compound having a functionality which can be converted into a hydrophilic property by an alkali in the developing solution, or an oleophilic compound which causes no change in the chemical property during the exposure to cause the formation of an image by an interaction between an alkali and a functional group of the compound, the compound having a functional group which can convert the property of the resin layer into a hydrophilic one by an alkali, or the oleophilic compound which causes no change in the chemical property. On the other hand, as the radiation source used for the exposure of the negative-working plate having such a structure, the KrF excimer laser (248 nm) of a wavelength of about 248 nm is mainly used at present. As the sensitizer for the resist, there are used those having the minimum absorption wavelength as close to the wavelength of the radiation source as possible, and the conventional positive-working sensitizers having an absorption wavelength of about 300 to 300 nm are unsuitable for the negative-working sensitizer used with a KrF excimer laser because a strong interaction must be taken place between the resist and the irradiated light, and the resin composition for the image-forming layer generally has a large absorption at a wavelength shorter than about 300 nm.

What's New In Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.1)?

Image copyright Getty Images Ricky Gervais has come out as a supporter of Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn. The comedian, 56, has launched a book called Life's a Riot - and they all deserve to Burn!, where he defends Mr Corbyn and other left-wing figures. And he's joined the Labour leader at a party in Carlisle on Wednesday evening. In his book, he defends Mr Corbyn after he faced criticism in June for saying he would only "love" an MP who stood as a Labour candidate. "I have some rather odd ideas," he writes. "I think that George Galloway should be prime minister and that the French president should be a woman. "I think that we should live under the rule of law rather than the will of the majority. "I think that Tony Blair was a war criminal and should be ashamed of himself. I think that David Cameron is a twat. I think that David Starkey should be put in charge of the BBC, and that Jeremy Corbyn is the future of Labour." Image copyright Getty Images He continued: "Can you imagine a time when the left of the Labour party get anything done? The left would get in so deep, it would be impossible to get them out... it would be like going to war with the other side. "The Labour party is supposed to be to the left, but it's also supposed to be the party of the working class. That means that we have to be more left than the left. We have to be the left." Mr Gervais also attacks the Westminster media - saying it is "biased" against Mr Corbyn and his supporters, citing the Mail on Sunday as an example. "The newspaper is funded by billionaires that were sucking up to the Tories, and the people who are the owners of the newspaper gave the job to a straight-up Blairite. So that's why the media is like it is," he wrote. His book is available for pre-order on Amazon. I'm excited to offer a 12 hour Intro to VB.NET class on January 24, 2001!
