How to Use Photoshop Step 1 Download Photoshop CS6 (free for Windows and Mac) or Photoshop CC (free for Mac only) and install the software. As a new user, you'll be prompted to enter your Adobe ID. Next, you'll need to select a new document or open a previous image in Photoshop. Clicking the New button will open the Photoshop interface with a blank canvas. You'll need to import an image into the program. You can import it from an external source or open a new image in Photoshop. In the top left corner, you'll be given the option to create a new file or open an existing document. Click Open in the New Document dialog box, locate the image you want to work with, and click Open. You can see thumbnails of the image in the tools panel on the right. As you can see, the image has a single, default layer. Step 2 This step details how to create a new layer, change the layer's blending mode, and change the opacity of the layer. To create a new layer, click on New. On the blank canvas, click on the New Layer button. This will open the New Layer dialog box. In the Layers panel at the bottom left, click on the arrow next to the New Layer button (the button that looks like a stacked magazine) and select the Solid button. Underneath the New Layer button is a drop-down menu that says Solid. As of this writing, the default setting is 50% Opacity. Depending on the shape of the image, it may be necessary to adjust the drop-down menu to open the New Layer dialog box and choose Other Options. Step 3 Once you've clicked on the Solid button, you'll see the New Layer dialog box open. Click on the first color swatch in the Fill box and then click OK. The color of the layer should change to gray. The color swatch is the same color as the palette. If the color doesn't change to gray, you might have saved the image under a different color space. For that, you might need to save the image as a new file or import the image into Photoshop. For this tutorial, use the color #cccccc. Step 4 Click on the New Layer button again and this time choose the Luminosity button. This will open the New Layer dialog box. Underneath the New Layer button is a

Q: Counting instances of a field in a gsutil ls I have a directory that consists of a bunch of zip files. Let's say that the following files exist in the directory: /home/user/Desktop/sample /home/user/Desktop/sample/test /home/user/Desktop/sample/test2 /home/user/Desktop/sample/test3 I'm trying to count how many zip files exist in the directory, so my output will look like this: /home/user/Desktop/sample 2 /home/user/Desktop/sample/test 2 /home/user/Desktop/sample/test2 1 /home/user/Desktop/sample/test3 1 I'm trying to do this in gsutil, but I haven't been able to find how to do this. So far, I've been using this: gsutil ls -l -r /home/user/Desktop/sample But it only gives me a list of the files in the directory, not the number of files. A: You can use the GNU-way of counting file attributes. find -x \! -newer /var/spool/computing/mydir -exec gsutil ls -l {} \; | grep "^-=" | awk '{print $NF}' This will output one file per line, which is what you want. Change {print $NF} to {print NF} to get a row per file, but I prefer using the GNU-way :) For example: [me@~]$ ls -l -rw-r--r-- 1 me me 0 Dec 24 23:18 test -rw-r--r-- 1 me me 0 Dec 24 23:21 sample [me@~]$ find -x \! -newer test -exec gsutil ls -l {} \; | grep "^-=" | awk '{print $NF}' 7 [me@~]$ PS: Thanks to @osboxes and @bsaunders for the corrections. A: In addition to the answer mentioned above, you can also do grep -c "[^/]*\?" /home

A Pakistani man has been arrested over an acid attack on a student in Birmingham which left the woman scarred for life, police said today. Zainab Amin was repeatedly doused with acid over a 10-minute period in front of her family home in Perry Barr. The 18-year-old, was stabbed in her eye in August before the attacker threw acid over her skin. A 30-year-old man has been arrested on suspicion of the attack, which happened in the city centre. West Midlands police said he is currently in police custody. Officers said her family believe the attacker has links to the militant Islamic group al-Muhajiroun. Hundreds of people have signed a petition calling on the UK government to deport the radical preacher, Anjem Choudary, over fears he may incite violence. Mr Choudary has been a vocal critic of the September 11 attacks and an ally of Osama Bin Laden. But Miss Amin's mother, Shabnam, said she felt Miss Amin was targeted over her religion. "My daughter is very hard-working but she has a beard and wears a hijab. She works for the BBC but has had to be replaced because she wears the hijab," she said. "I know someone who was targeted last year. They were talking to a guy who was with Choudary. The same thing happened to him. "I think it is in retaliation for what he says. They are taking revenge on his views." Miss Amin was taken to hospital after the attack, and is now undergoing reconstructive surgery after acid was thrown in her face. "I don't want to be called a victim. I'm not a victim. I am alive. I don't want to be called a survivor, I want to be called a fighter." Miss Amin said her family was put in "a very dark place" after the attack. "It all started because the Quran was thrown on the floor in my house," she said. "I picked it up and threw it to the bin. Two men came into the room, one put a knife to my throat, threatened to cut me. "My husband shouted at them and tried to protect me. The second man poured acid over my face. The third
