tourist slogan in Berlin is "Everything's bigger in Germany." With white train lines that appear to slice through the city skyline, bike lanes and wide, sandy beaches, it's hard to deny that the German capital offers up its best vistas among the 270 cities ranked in the UN's annual World Tourism Organization's Travel & Tourism Competitiveness Report. That's according to the German news outlet, Spiegel Online. The ranking looks at four primary categories: "economic competitiveness," "ease of doing business," "quality of life" and "enjoyment and natural environment." Berlin takes 1st place and Munich 3rd. Berlin is now the world's most competitive tourist destination, according to the 2015 Travel & Tourism Competitiveness Report. Spiegel Online ranked Berlin first overall with a score of 92.1, followed by Munich at 88.8, Amsterdam at 85.7 and Paris at 82.5. Coming in fifth place is London at 76.2, followed by Istanbul at 70.6 and Washington, D.C. at 67. The report says Berlin's number one tourist draw is its "high quality of living" with its "superb public transport and efficient infrastructure, which makes travel very easy." The
