Version 1.1.Complications of short segmental renal artery stenting in rats. To assess the safety and efficacy of placement of a self-expanding nitinol stent in rat renal arteries. Ten adult male Sprague-Dawley rats received self-expanding nitinol stents in the renal artery ipsilateral to the operated kidney. The right kidney was removed 8 weeks later. Vascular cross-sections at the site of stent placement were examined by histology. Stent placement was successful in all animals and re-stenosis was not observed in any stented rat at the end of 8 weeks. The rat has a self-opening stent similar to that used in human beings.The present invention relates to an assembly of shaft parts that can be assembled together in two different axial angular positions to form a shaft
