PC Blackmagic.Facing a deepening local and global recession, Iraq's finance minister has requested $1bn of aid from international donors to save his country's economy. "All of us need to shoulder the responsibility of doing more to help Iraq and avoid a collapse of the economy," Ali al-Obeidi said in a statement on Tuesday. "If we fail, Iraq is going to collapse, and the region will be flooded with refugees and jobs will be lost." Al-Obeidi also reportedly requested $65bn in direct and indirect aid from the international community, in addition to $1bn of non-lethal aid he says is "necessary to protect the unity and stability of the country and the security of its people".

Approximately $130bn has been withdrawn from Iraq's banks since the US invasion of 2003, the main source of foreign currency reserves in the country, according to international economic research group Capital Economics. Al-Obeidi said the central bank has launched an emergency plan to restructure banks and keep support payments in order to maintain their liquidity. He added that the government "is currently facing the collapse of the finance, transport, and telecommunications sectors, and is having difficulty in paying for urgent goods and services". The efforts also aim to rescue the value of the Iraqi dinar, which has declined as the government struggles to keep up with the plunging global oil prices, a problem compounded by a lack of international aid. The dinar has dropped from around $1.50 in June 2008 to as low as 20,000 to the US dollar in November, leading to an extreme shortage of imported goods. Iraqis have also had to buy food from abroad at inflated prices, exacerbated by the sanctions regime imposed by the US and the UN as punishment for failing to disarm its weapons of mass destruction programme. A humanitarian crisis is also taking place, with nearly 1.5 million refugees and internally displaced persons now living in poor and overstretched camps. But al-Obeidi insisted the government has taken steps to solve the crisis, adding that the monthly social and economic programmes introduced by the central bank in June will be continued, including cash payments for state salaries, increased spending on public services, and loans to needy families. The country will also introduce a system of price controls to "avoid
