Motion Tech is featured in the game's new Player Impact Engine (PIE), which not only improves ball physics, but also impacts the ability of players to run, jump, tackle, and dribble. Players with speed, agility, and pace will be able to run faster and with greater power, as the PIE speeds up the player's feet. More than 200 real-life actions have been captured and recorded. These actions, which provide greater realism when players are approaching, or have just completed a tackle, will help players appear in-game and on the pitch in a more natural way. Additionally, the PIE will now give players more options on how they can approach and tackle other players. These changes will make life easier for players in the heat of the game, resulting in more natural and realistic in-game collisions. Players will also be able to benefit from the PIE by moving with quicker, more skilled players and receiving more accurate passes. Realistic Player Trajectories 2K Sports is partnering with Saber-Tec, an artificial intelligence development firm, to use Saber-Tec's capabilities in motion data processing to achieve a more natural, in-game behavior of the character's body. The "Mobility Radar" will use patented technology to move players naturally without making them look as if they are floating. New Abilities Due to the PIE and additional technology introduced in Motion Tech, players will have more options to unlock new abilities. The ball should now behave realistically, which will lead to more control when receiving, controlling and playing the ball. Additionally, players will be able to use their free-kicks with greater accuracy, and will be able to perform overhead kicks in a more realistic way. Virtual Kit Within Fifa 22 Activation Code, each player will have the ability to design their own unique in-game virtual kit. When players create their club jersey in the Create-a-Player mode, they will choose the player's performance statistics, which will affect the way the player looks in the game. 2K Sports also announced that the physical appearance of the player will be driven by the statistics they enter, and players will be graded on how they look compared to real-life players. Each kit can be customized with personal style and
