What's New in the?

Peru: The Peruvian government has moved to outlaw the sale of endangered species, in a bid to reverse the global trade in animals. Environment minister Ricardo Cristopher announces the new regulations to ban the selling and export of the Caiman, (Felix columbianus) and the Giant Pacu, (Pacu gigas) in a ceremony in Lima on August 15. More than 1,000 tons of the reptile are sold each year in Peru and from other South American nations to the United States. However, Caiman and Giant Pacu are critically endangered and the sale is banned in Peru and most other South American nations. But the US imports the creatures legally. "Giant Pacu and Caiman are two species that are increasingly endangered. The scientists and the government have warned us of the increasing losses, and now it is the time to take action," Cristopher said. "The ministry has taken the necessary and well-measured decision to prohibit the sale and export of Caiman and Giant Pacu in Peru and in the rest of South America." The move follows a campaign by members of the Peruvian government and scientists. The Caiman and Pacu are listed as endangered species by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) and American and Peruvian governments. Caiman and Pacu are now also listed as included in the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) which regulates international trade in protected species. The ministry's ban on the sale and export of Giant Pacu and Caiman is expected to come into force on November 1.Among the impacts of climate change, extreme heat has been arguably one of the most devastating to human health and well-being, with deaths increasing in proportion to temperature in many parts of the world. Much of the world's population, including over a billion people in South Asia and sub-Saharan Africa, lives in areas that are projected to experience maximum temperatures over 50°C. Furthermore, heat waves typically occur episodically, but the frequency of heat waves has increased in recent decades with climate change. Heat-related morbidity and mortality may be anticipated to rise in the coming decades, and heat waves may also have longer-term effects on morbidity and mortality as a result of the associated degradation of air quality and water quality, and from the direct effects of high temperature on the human body \[[@R1
