Roblox is an online virtual community and game platform where everyone has the opportunity to create, play, and learn with friends in a 3D game environment. Roblox is an online game and game creation system that allows players to develop their own games by creating their own game components, or to play pre-made games online with other players. The Roblox online platform provides access to a wide variety of features, including games, rich media, virtual items, events, events, user-created content, user groups, business opportunities, work, and educational tools. Roblox was created by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel in 2004, and in 2007 it was acquired by the Roblox Corporation, one of the largest companies in the video game industry. In February 2020, Roblox has more than 164 million monthly active users, including more than half of all American children under 16. Its user-generated content has been viewed by thousands of millions of people. According to PC and console games industry analysts,[6][7] as of August 2020, Roblox has grossed more than $1.5 billion in revenue and is the most profitable company in the games industry. Established as a free-to-play platform, Roblox has received generally positive reviews from critics. However, it has faced criticism for its moderation, microtransactions, and exploitative practices directed toward children. In June 2019, Roblox Corporation reported that the number of users had increased to 171 million monthly active users, with more than half of them located in the United States. In October 2019, the platform published a statement on microtransactions stating that they are not profitable and that they are there to support its Game Center community. In 2014, Roblox Interactive was recognized by Guinness World Records for having the most unique video game characters, with 37,849,964, 5,446,217 of which are available in the Roblox platform. It was announced by Jay Greene and Gerard Sullivan at the NCC Group's InterConnect 2014 in September 2016 that the company sold a majority interest in Roblox for $540 million to a private investment firm. At the time, Roblox had over 30 million registered users. In 2019, Mike Wilson, the CEO of the company, estimated that as of that year, the game had more than 50 million users and over 100 million game hours played monthly. Overview The
